DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF WASHINGTON COUNTY

VOLUME I.

SPRINGFIELD, KY., WEDNESDAY, JULY 5, 1905.

NUMBER 32

Brutal Murder.

(Marion Falcon.)

Between 4 and 5 o'clock Monday morning George Logan, colored, cut his wife's throat with a knife and shot her through the left hand. Her windpipe and one artery in the neck were severed. The woman's fifteen-year-old son, came to his mother's aid and the attack was made on the man before she had gotten out of bed. The wounded are both still living, but are in critical conditions. After the difficulty Logan went to the knobs and has so far evaded the vigilance of the officers. The county has offered a reward of $25 for his arrest, and the probabilities are that he will soon be in the hands of the law. The crime is one of the most bloodthirsty that has been committed in this county for many years, and furnishes up a criminal that should be promptly sent to his reward by the rope route. Later—About 9:30 o'clock last night Logan surrendered to Deputy Sheriff Jack Fisher and he was delivered to Jailor Madden at 11 o'clock. Fisher located him on the farm of Mr. William Bowman.

Husband And Child Gone.

(Harrodsburg Democrat.)

A prominent citizen of Wilmore, who was in the city yesterday, was seen by a Democrat reporter, and being asked about the news of his little town, gave the following:

Mrs. Eliza Preston, who lives at Mt. Freedom, two miles from Wilmore, came to town Saturday out of breath from having run all the way, and excitedly rushed up to Capt. V. G. Mulligan and asked him to trail her husband with his bloodhounds, saying he had left home with her infant child. The woman was very much excited.

After a quarrel with her husband, the woman said she had gone to a neighbor's for a few minutes, and on her return found her husband and child gone. She said he had previously threatened to do so, and when she did not find them, she was convinced that he had carried out his threat. She thinks he has gone to Garrard county, where he has relatives. Captain Mulligan refused to interfere, saying that he had adopted the policy of keeping out of family affairs.

Thus far nothing has been heard from Mr. Preston and the child.

Made a High Dive.

(Lebanon Enterprise.)

Master Harvey Johnston, eldest son of Mr. C. B. Johnston, met with a painful accident last Saturday when in swimming in the pond at the Mueller, Wathen & Robert distillery. With a number of his young friends he was playing "street fair" and had taken the part of "Mat Gay," the high diver. In making the leap headfirst into the pond, the water was either too shallow or the tower upon which he stood too high, and he struck a rock at the bottom, inflicting a painful injury. A physician was called, who sewed up the wound and Harvey will soon be all right again.

Married Nine Times.

(Harrodsburg Herald.)

Matilda Jane Ayres, the prettiest girl and the best cook in Taylor county, although but thirty-three years of age, has been married nine times and has never been divorced. It is claimed that she holds the world's present record as to husbands; but, then, she began early, eloping when she was only fifteen. Her ninth (and latest) marriage took place last week at the church on Piney creek, in Taylor county. Her full name is Matilda Jane Harkins-Elliott-Boards-Wyckton-Lowman-Lowman-Hudson-Dimes-Nil-Ayres. The new mate's name is Mason Ayres.

He's From Missouri.

A Washington County (Missouri) editor: "One of our newly married young ladies knelt bread with her gloves on. The editor of this paper needs bread with his shoes on; he needs it with his trousers on, and unless the delinquent readers of this old rag of freedom pay up soon we will need bread without a darn thing on."

Lee Furman and John O'Brien, white, were hanged at Lancaster, Pa., for the murder of an old tollgate keeper.

Mercer Notes.

(Herald.)

Hope Wright's fine shepherd dog had both of his hind legs cut off by a train Sunday. The dog was running along the track snapping at the wheels, and section drew him under. After being injured he dragged himself three squares. He was killed to end his misery.

While taking a walk on the railroad Tuesday, and when a mile from town, Mr. Charley Bennett was overcome by the heat and fell unconscious on the track. A passer-by happened to notice him and dragged him off the rails just in time to save his life, for in less than a minute afterward a train passed over the spot where he had lain.

Mr. James H. Settles came near being killed in a friendly wrestle with Smiley Dean last Friday. His foot slipped and he fell, Dean landing on top of him, his elbow striking Mr. Settles just below the heart, knocking the breath out of him and breaking three of his ribs. He says that the agony before he began to breathe again was awful.

At Perryville Sunday night a number of shots were fired on the street, and it is reported that some one tried to get in the bank door, but was put to flight by "Uncle" Morrison Clark, who, surrounded by an arsenal, slept in the bank. He has been guardian of the treasure since the institution was founded.

Matters Adjusted.

(Courier-Journal.)

Mr. C. C. McChord, chairman of the State Railroad Commission, was at the Old Inn yesterday, returning home from a trip to Russellville, where he attended a meeting of the commission to adjust coal and tobacco rates.

"The tobacco men complained that the railroads were charging them too high freight rates on their tobacco, and lodged a complaint with us. After the commission was in session some of them appeared before it and asked to withdraw the complaint, stating that they had reached an agreement with the railroads. We asked what that agreement was, but they declined to tell us. We told them the complaint, once filed, was the property of the commission and could not be withdrawn. However, we consented to take the matter under advisement, and will make our decision known in a few days. I understand the railroads agreed to make a reduction of six cents a hundred in rates, and if that is the case it will apply to all of Kentucky and not to the Russellville district alone."

Kit Simpson Dead.

(Kentucky Standard.)

Christopher Simpson died last Thursday of infirmities incident to old age. He had been sick for about two months, and his death was not unexpected. He was about eighty years old at the time of his death. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn his death.

Deceased was born and reared in Washington county, but came to Nelson when a young man. He married Miss Sallie Payne, a sister to Mrs. Bettie Downs and John Green Payne. He had lived at his home, "the bluff," up to the time of his death.

With him passes away the most noted "moonshine" in Kentucky. He was never arrested or imprisoned for illicit distilling. Such has been the shrewdness of the man.

So noted had Uncle Kit become that a photograph of him was taken and enlarged and sent to the St. Louis World's Fair and placed by the side of the picture of Governor Beckham. The two noted Kentuckians received much attention from visitors from all parts of the world.

One of the greatest achievements of Mr. Simpson's life, and one in which he took great pride in telling, was that once he was arrested by a party of United States marshals and was being led away. Passing by some cliffs of rock, he seized his opportunity to push two of the marshals off the cliff, and the other two, seeing the awful danger of their two companions, took flight and ran away, leaving Uncle Kit alone. But Uncle Kit was a good citizen and made money by minding his own business. Life's fitful fever over, he now sleeps well. HARRA.

Twenty gypsies have been arrested in Austria charged with eating children. The leaders of the band were alleged to have eaten eighteen little ones.

THAT 20 PER CENT. INCREASE

"Wiped Up" Before the State Board of Equalization.—Hon. W. D. Claybrooke, County Attorney Mayes and County Treasurer Noe Do Good Work for the Taxpayers.—A Saving of Over $5,000.

A FEW WORDS ABOUT FISCAL AFFAIRS IN WASHINGTON COUNTY.

At the meeting the Fiscal Court in April the county tax rate was reduced 30 cents, which was the fulfillment of a promise made by our county officials seven years ago, and this news, together with an announcement made at that time that Washington county was out of debt, was received with great enthusiasm by the taxpayers, but the full benefit of this great reduction in taxes was about to be lost because of the action of the State Board of Equalization, which gave us a raise of 20 per cent. on our valuations, and the taxpayers of the county were watching with a deep interest the outcome of the final action of the State Board, and the receipt of a telegram on June 30 from Frankfort from Hon. W. D. Claybrooke, County Attorney T. S. Mayes and County Treasurer Robert Noe, announcing that they had won the fight, was the occasion for general rejoicing among all of those who heard it.

The County Judge certainly made no mistake in selecting Messrs. Claybrooke, Mayes and Noe to represent the county before the State Board, for it is now seen that no better work could possibly have been done than that done by these gentlemen, and they are entitled to every word of praise that is now being uttered in their behalf, and, in fact, too much can not be said in approving of their splendid and masterful effort, which was crowned with such signal success.

Messrs. Claybrooke, Mayes and Noe had prepared themselves for the fight, and presented the case of the Washington county taxpayers from a business standpoint. All their arguments were attentively listened to by the State Board, which is composed of one member from each appellate district, and when the case was finally submitted to them for action, they were only a few minutes in reaching their decision.

The people of the county should not only feel proud of the success of their representatives before the State Board, but they have every reason to congratulate themselves upon the unprecedented record made by their county officials during the past seven years. They have built more bridges than ever before, during the same period, and have kept the tax rate the same as it was when they came into office. They have cancelled every dollar of the indebtedness of the county, and were paid the high compliment by a Federal Government official that "Washington is one of the best financed and best managed counties in the State."

Though there are a few grumblers, Washington county officials will take no backward steps, but with the high idea that they have of county government, will press forward and keep the county in the position she now occupies as a model county, whose affairs are honestly and economically administered by faithful public officials.

Messrs. Claybrooke, Mayes and Noe say that the State Board is composed of fair-minded men, and from the nature of their questions, showed that they had a very clear and comprehensive idea of the work, and our representatives feel under special obligations to the Board for allowing them a portion of the time allotted to Harrison county, whose delegation did not appear.

The reduction of 30 cents in tax rate means a reduction of $10,500 in taxes, and the fact that our representatives succeeded in getting off the 20 per cent. raise means an additional saving of more than $5,000 to the taxpayers of Washington county. This means much and it is no wonder that there is such general rejoicing among all who have heard the good news.

World's Political Horizon.

(By Paul Lambeth.)

London, June 25.—Never has the political horizon of the world been as clouded as it is now since the days when the great Napoleon played ball with the kingdoms of Europe. Everywhere is disorder and unrest. Russia is practically in a state of revolution, which only the strictest censorship prevents from becoming generally known. Street fights, which are regular battles, are being fought in the barricaded streets of Lodz. The danger of war between Norway and Sweden is by no means over. War between Germany and France is hanging over our heads like the sword of Damocles. Austria and Hungary are in a state of the greatest turmoil, and that actual civil war has not broken out is due only to the love and respect of everybody for the old Emperor, Francis Joseph. What will happen when he dies is impossible to foretell, but that his successor will not be the ruler of both countries, is a foregone conclusion. In Italy the people are being driven to despair by the increasing taxes, and the strength of the country is being sapped by the continuous emigration. In the Balkans there is the usual confusion, the people of the various Christian states killing each other and the Turks massacring them all. Behind the walls of his Konak in Belgrade, King Peter lives in steady fear of his life, a fear which has almost driven him insane. In Germany the Socialist criticism of the Kaiser is sharper than ever, and that in spite of the great risk incurred in writing anything which displeases the Emperor. What the Socialists especially object to is the Kaiser's growing extravagance. He owns eighty-three landed estates, all of them models in their line, and many of them very profitable, although the men working on the imperial estates are paid higher wages than anywhere else. The Kaiser is allowed an annual income of $4,000,000, but is always in financial straits, and the rumors in the English press that he had borrowed large amounts from Berlin bankers were undoubtedly true. In Spain King Alfonso is doing his best to keep his poverty-stricken people from rebelling. In all Europe England is the only quiet spot, and in the hands of King Edward lies largely the question of peace or war.

(Anderson News.)

At the home of Claude Burke, being erected on North Main street, there occurred a fire last Monday which originated from very peculiar causes. ## Going Down the Valley

(William L. McNeil in Bryan's Column.)

An aged man lay dying one evening in a western hotel. In the office on the floor below a number of friends had congregated to await the end. Aside from those friends and the members of the family gathered at the bedside it was not generally known that in that great building a life was going out. In the parlor on the same floor on which the dying man's room was located assembled a little party, all ignorant of the important events going on within a few doors. A sweet-faced girl was asked to sing. Soon the men waiting in the office below and the grief-stricken women gathered at the bedside of the dying father and husband were listening to one of the sweetest voices ever heard singing one of the sweetest songs ever sung. The watchers heard:

We are going down the valley one by one
With our faces toward the setting of the sun—
Down the valley where the mournful cypress grows,
Where the stream of death in silence onward flows.

Instantly every man in the office below removed his hat, and one of the watchers at the bedside opened the door a bit wider as the sweet singer gave the refrain:

We are going down the valley, going down the valley,
Going toward the setting of the sun;
We are going down the valley, going down the valley,
Going down the valley one by one.

It was plain to the persons gathered at that bedside that the dying man heard and understood the singer and the song. Plainly he was straining his ears to catch the music and the words, and plainly he succeeded, because a smile lighted up his face upon which the death damp had already gathered as the girl sang.

We are going down the valley one by one,
Human comrades there will you and I have none,
But a tender hand will guide us lest we fall—
Christ is going down the valley with us all.

As though anticipating the wish of the dying man, the watchers at the bedside, their voices trembling with emotion, sang again the last verse. As they concluded: "But a tender hand will guide us lest we fall; Christ is going down the valley with us all," the watchers knew that that particular voyage was at an end; and in their heart of hearts they felt that their friend had not been unattended in his pilgrimage.

It has been written that "most fear death as children fear to go in the dark; and that natural fear in children is increased with tales, so is the other." But children may be trained to abandon their fears of the night, which is just as much a part of nature as the day—even as death is as much a part of divine law as birth. And "men, who are only boys grown tall, for hearts don't change much, after all," ought to outgrow these fears that, properly, have no place in the thoughts of intelligent men.

Of course it is easier to make such suggestions than to act on them; but it is unreasonable to believe that the present-day dread of death could be measurably reduced if men were educated by others—and by themselves—to regard it as passing through the very thin shadow separating the living from the dead?

Some will say that the way to cure these fears is pointed out in "the fear of the mothers." We know that men have been greatly strengthened by that faith when "going down the valley," but we know, too, that many men whose opinions did not lie exactly along the lines of the orthodox religion, and other men who had no fixed religious belief, have met death without a tremor. We know, also, that even among men who are firm believers, and among men who have lived entire lives of correct lives, the fear of death—not alone the natural reluctance to terminate life—exists in pronounced form. Even the faith that is bred in the bone of the member of the exodus household has not served in all cases—not as a rule—to cure men of the fear of the summons from "over there." Because this is so men should teach one another to look upon death not as an unnatural thing, but as mere fulfillment of God's law; for "we are going down the valley one by one."

Death is no more mysterious than birth, and there need be no more of the elements of tragedy in the one than in the other. Every man who dreads not death and meets it calmly sets an example to his living fellows; and the instances—there are many—where men have without fear or trembling closed their eyes for all time are worthy of being recalled occasionally. It would be well if the popular conception of death could be somewhat revised through frequent recitals of instances where death-bed scenes have proved an inspiration to the living.

Colonel Sol. G. Kitchen, of Missouri,

he turned to his good wife and said: "The end is drawing near, but we must not worry." And then with striking emphasis, he added: "It's all right; and I'll be standing right there, Kate, waiting for you on the other shore with outstretched arms." Some one has said: "The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes." Perhaps it was merely a coincidence, but it is, however, a fact that at the very moment when the spirit of this brave man took his flight there came a heavy peal of thunder; and as the hands were folded on the breast, Senator William V. Allen, one of the watchers at the bedside, turned to a companion and said: "It is as though the artillery of heaven were firing a salute in welcome to a superbly brave man."

Though we may call the thunder peal a mere coincidence, who will say that it was not eminently fitting that the heavens themselves should blaze forth the death of a man capable of so much love, courage and philosophy?

"Will we not do well to remember that 'man makes a death which nature never made,' and that 'it is impossible that anything so natural, so necessary and so universal as death, should ever have been designed by Providence as an evil to mankind.'"

Don't you remember the story of "He and She?" They said she was dead. They left the room, glad to get away from its awful stillness. They sought to take him with them. "But he who loved her too well to dread the sweet, the stately, the beautiful dead, he lit his lamp and took the key and turned it—alone again, he and she. He and She, but she would not speak, though he kissed in the old place, the quiet cheek. He and she; yet she would not smile, though he called her the name she loved erewhile. He and she; still she did not move to any passionate whisper of love."

He wanted to know whether there was a language of death and what was the infinite wonder of it all; he wanted to learn the very strangest and suddenest thing of all surprises that dying must bring. With his hot tears raining on the dear, sweet face he pleaded for a word. Did he plead in vain? "Who will believe that he heard her say, with the sweet, soft voice in the dear old way? The utmost wonder is this—I hear and see you, and love you and kiss you, dear, and am your angel who was your bride, and know that, though dead, I have never died."

Blind Man Shoots.

(Anderson News.)

The negroes of this city on last Saturday night had a general gathering in the Grove, and among those who attended were Frank Mosley, colored man who has been working for W. J. Hyatt for some months, and George McColey, who is well known locally as the blind negro.

During the evening these two men became involved in a quarrel, and, before the others present could interfere, a number of shots rang out, and Mosley was weltering in his blood, while McColey calmly left the place and walked down the street to the depot with the smoking weapon in his hand. At this point he was arrested by Marshal Stevens and lodged in jail, where he is being held to await the result of his shooting.

STRAIGHT TALK.

BY Miss Alert Watchfulness.

A man with the nicest wife and the very nicest baby asked me the other day how to keep the baby quiet, and I very promptly replied: "See that the mother has a contented mind. That is the best recipe I know of." Don't imagine, because your home looks cozy and comfortable when you return to it at night, that it is well either for the baby's sake or its mother's that you should never take the latter out of it for relaxation and fresh air. Oh, if you but knew how a woman loves a man for these little things—little to you, great to her! I know it is less trouble to step into some down-town store—if your purse is well lined—and order home a new bonnet—yes, a bonnet which, your ostrich husband fancies, will cover all his conjugal selfishness and sins of omission and commission. He would rather give her this than take the weary mother out for the fresh air, and then he wonders why the "baby worries" and keeps both awake at night, and why the mother's eyes look so restless and why she heaves that little sigh when she sits down to read his paper; but, then, he settles down to the very comfortable conclusion that, "after all, there is no understanding woman," and just reads on. Sometimes he will answer, "Ah!" or "Oh!" or "By Jakes!" But you are doing well to get even that much out of him. Now, good sirs, "bonnets" don't cure the headache; and all the jewels you could toss into a woman's lap (I speak of a TRUE woman) are not worth one clasp of your arms around her neck when you come from your place of business. We don't want forever to TAKE IT FOR GRANTED that you love us. We are demonstrative, we women. You do not need to break your back to pick up your wife's handkerchief, as you did in the old court days (heavens, how you jumped around then!)—neither does she wish you to come in and hang your hat and coat up in the hall and go into the parlor, sit down and cross your legs as you used to do. No; she would rather you would come upstairs and give her the return kiss, which is so potent to make her forget all the little mosquitoes—stinging household annoyances, which are only a feather's weight when our hearts are light and happy—for it is not work, but worry, which makes leaden hearts and footsies. Of course all wives are not alike, or husbands either, thank goodness—as if a doctor had but one kind of a pill for all his patients! That's an unfortunate figure of speech, I know; still, there ARE good doctors, and, as a class, they are much more somer than any other profession, though I HAVE seen some editors—but that is neither here nor there. Ah, now you listen! You have a family doctor, and you, and you and you. Very good. See to it that you are as agreeable and gentlemanly as he is. He doesn't go to sleep the minute your wife comes into the room, or turn his back upon her and sit down and read politics all the evening, with an occasional grunt of assent or dissent to some invisible person—nor does any other gentleman who visits your house. Perhaps now you think the subject worth considering. I shouldn't be very much surprised.

People With Only One Idea.

I believe there are people with only one idea—at least, if they have more, they keep it a profound secret, for they never talk but of one subject. I saw a schoolboy once that could not read unless it be his own book; and the man of one idea can not converse out of his own subject. That is not conversation, only a sort of recital of the preamble of a bill, or a collection of grave arguments for a man's being of opinion with himself. It would be well if there was anything of character, of eccentricity, in all this, but that is not the case. It is a political homily personified, a walking commonplace we have to encounter and listen to. It is just as if a man was to insist on your hearing him go through the first chapter of the Book of Judges every time you meet. It is a tune played on a barrel organ. It is only a common vehicle of discourse into which such persons get and are set down when they please, without any pain or trouble to themselves, but to the infinite pain and trouble of all whom they get by the ear or button.

R. Frank Vaughan, of Portsmouth, Va., cast his vote in a primary election and committed suicide.

The police of New York arrested a man for running a pool room in a gymnasium.

Eight Negroes Lynched.

Watkinsville, Ga., June 29.—Eight prisoners were taken from the jail here this morning and shot to death by a mob of masked white men within 200 yards of the center of the town.

Nine men were carried to the scene of the lynching, but one miraculously escaped death by falling to the ground when the volley was fired and feigning that he had been killed.

Four of the prisoners were charged with being implicated in the murder of John Holbrook and his wife several weeks ago, and one was held for an attempted criminal assault. The others were in jail on minor misdemeanor charges.

The mob formed quietly just after midnight and marched in order to the jail, where the keys were demanded of the jailer. The demand was made at the point of two revolvers and pistols, and the jailer quickly realized that resistance was out of the question. With the keys in his possession, the mob opened all the cells, ordered the trembling inmates out, and then lined the men up in single file, tying them securely with ropes.

The prisoners, nine in number, were marched to a corner lot within 200 of the jail and in the heart of the town, where they were bound to a fence with their hands tied behind them.

The work had been so quietly done that the sleeping residents of the town had not been aroused.

At a command by the leader the mob stepped back a few paces, took deliberate aim and fired a volley from rifles, shotguns and pistols into the line of prisoners. Every man in front of the mob fell at the first volley.

Believing this work had been made complete, the mob quickly dispersed. An examination by the jailer, who had been forced by the mob to accompany it to the scene of execution, showed that eight of the men had been killed by the bullets, but Joe Patterson, the negro who had feigned death when the volley was fired, was found to have been only slightly injured. Patterson escaped death as by a miracle, for the fence post to which he had been bound was torn into fragments by the bullets. He possessed the presence of mind to fall with his ill-fated companions and remain motionless upon the ground.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

Child Not Expected to Live From One Hour to Another, but Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey, of Agnewville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up, and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says. "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy, and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it, and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well. This remedy is for sale by C. J. Haydon, druggist."

Over the Hills and Far Away.

(Eugene Field.)

Over the hills and far away
A little boy steals from his morning play.

And under the blossoming apple tree
He lies and he dreams of the things to be.

Of battles fought and of victories won,
Of wrongs overthrown and great things done.

Of the valor that he shall prove some day
Over the hills and far away.

Over the hills and far away—
Over the hills and far away!

It's oh! for the toil of the ivy-leaved day!
But it matters not to the soul aflame

With a love for riches and power and fame!
Over the hills and far away!

Oh! O man! while the sun is high—
On to the certain joys that lie

Yonder, where blazes the noon of day,
Over the hills and far away!

Over the hills and far away.
An old man lingers at close of day!

Now that his journey is almost done,
His battles fought and victories won.

The old time honesty and truth,
The trustfulness and the friends of youth.

Home and mother—where are they?
Over the hills and far away!

We have received a marked copy of a paper printed out in Kansas, which kicks us with its hind hoofs, paws us with its front ones, switches its tail and flops its ears at us, and brays! brays! brays! just because we said a Kentucky woman was prettier than all others of God's creatures here below—prettier than His roses, and lilies, and daisies, and clover blooms—prettier than an unguarded vault of gold coin!—yea, yea, prettier than a shepherd pup with a blue ribbon around its neck. We don't mind being kicked and pawed and yaw-hawed!; the limnents soon relieve us, but when the Kansas sister is trotted up 'longside a Kentucky woman and a comparison invited we feel hurt clean down to our three big corns. It's perfectly horri-bull! and the editor of this Kansas paper can only be excused for so recklessly switching his tail upon the grounds of "ignorance."

The Democrats of Washington county are now preparing to show the Republicans how useless it is for them to attempt to carry the county. The work of organizing has already begun and one of the completest organizations ever made by the Democracy of any county in Kentucky will be found right here in Washington county.

Don't complain! Be glad that you are not in the same boat with the boy who has crowded his stomach with green apples.

There is not another county in the State with a worthier lot of county officials than Washington. Every office is filled by a man who guards the interests of the county as he guards his individual interests. It will only require a look at the books to convince one of the truth of this statement.

Governor Beckham has re-sented the sentence of a woman, sent to the penitentiary from Martin county for killing another woman, who, it is claimed, alienated the affections of her husband. When the sheriff brought the unfortunate to prison she bore in her arms an infant. The Governor's reason for sending the woman back to her home is that it would be cruel to confine an infant in the penitentiary where there is little sunshine and much foul air. It is now in order for the "anti"-administration newspapers to fume and fret about the abuse of the pardoning power.

The Republicans are going to hold a convention here the 22th of this month, it is said for the purpose of making "a few nominations." Upon what grounds they are going to ask the tax payers of Washington county to vote against any one of our present county officials we are at a loss to know.

"Several times during the Democratic State Convention on Wednesday, just as everybody was settling down to the belief that 'bygones were bygones,' that past differences were forgotten, that old heroes had quietly taken their places on the shelf, and that a new era of brotherly love and fresh development had set in, some speaker suddenly rounded a period about 'William Jennings Bryan, and then the rafters rattled'."

The above is from the Cincinnati Enquirer, which has quit voting the Democratic ticket since John R. McLean, its millionaire owner and proprietor, "has been defeated for office every time he stuck his head up." Of course, the rafters rattled when a period about William Jennings Bryan was rounded out. For about eight years the "rafters have rattled" in Democratic conventions every time a speaker auro and remarked "William!!! Jennings!!!"

Hon. W. W. Tabb, of Hardin county, recently nominated for State Senator, has declared for Senator Blackburn.

Bob Noe, Scott Mayes and Bill Claybrooke made that 20 per cent. increase turn a backward summersault and skeedaddle.

"Them Ky. Women"

(Indianapolis Daily Star.)
Kentuckians have always been known as the champions of woman. There is, however, in the following expression of the editor of the Springfield (Ky.) Sun such a rhapsodical ecstasy that one is almost forced to attribute it in part to the seductive ministrations of that grand Commonwealth as well as to the alluring charms of Kentucky womanhood. Listen:

Kentucky women have been recognized the world over as the prettiest creatures ever fashioned by the hand of God. 'Twill ever be true, because they love Kentucky and Kentucky worships them. Did you ever see a man with his head resting upon a bank of lilies? There's inspiration in a picture of that sort. But, away! when it comes to real beauty—beauty that staggers you, beauty that makes your heart gallop up and down your spine and causes you to go away off somewhere and write poetry—a Kentucky beauty has got the work skinned from its toe nails to the north pole, and the man who says she "ain't it" lacks information.

We suppose the author of this knows fully whereof he writes. We confess that we cannot grasp him fully, but we are willing to attribute this failure to our own weakness, and not for a moment would we imitate that the figures here are overdrawn. Beautiful women affect men differently, and it may be that when the editor of The Sun rests his tired eyes on one of Kentucky's fair visions, he feels as though a colt were galloping madly up and down his vertebrae. It may be, too, that when he sees one of these companion pieces of wine and song—this is the trinity in Kentucky—he does go away off somewhere. Nor would we imply for a moment that the outpouring here quoted intimates that he goes off in the upper story. Passing by the "skinning" qualities of the women of Kentucky, we take up the following from our Kentucky contemporary:

Figure it out on a rose leaf and write with the brew of a lily that nowhere under the great blue dome is there a creature half so pretty as a Kentucky woman. She's prettier than an evening star in the a-l-a-l-o-w of a summer's use; more inspiring than a thousand songs, and as bewitching as a fawn entangled in the vines of a wilderness of roses. She's our hope, our romance, our vine and fig tree—the light which enables us to see a million miles beyond the north star.

Really we cannot jest in the light of this. It is too sacredly beautiful for any ruthless suggestion. Blessed indeed is Kentucky to be the home of such a race of women, and blessed are these women to have such a champion. We cannot resist, however, in offering the suggestion to the wife of the editor of The Sun that if she is in need of a new gingham dress, or would like to tangle in the vines of a wilderness of roses, she should visit upon this as the psychological moment. No man confronted with such an encomium as this—time that had got out of his own system—could deny his fair and lovely backbone agitator any boon she might ask.

Spoiled Her Beauty.

Hayden's drug store."

The Wings of The Morning

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright, 1905, by Edward J. Clode

Sir Arthur willingly allowed himself to be persuaded. At the back of his head there was an uneasy consciousness that it was not at all of price "at all." It was he would never start a man's face again. But Ventnor's well balanced arguments availed him. The course indicated was the only decent one. It was humbly impossible for a man to chide his daughter and flout her rescuer within an hour of finding them.

Lord Ventnor played his cards with a deeper design. He bowed to the inevitable. Iris said she loved his rival. Very well. To attempt to dissuade her was to throw her more closely into that rival's arms. The right course was to appear resigned, saddened, compelled against his will to reveal the distressing truth. Further, he counted on Anstruther's quick temper as an active agent. Such a man would be the first to rebel against an assumption of pitying tolerance. He would bring bitter charges of conspiracy, of unbelievable compact to secure his ruin. All this must recoil on his own head when the facts were laid bare. Not even the hero of the island could prevail against the terrible indictment of the court martial. Finally, at Singapore, three days distant, Colonel Costello and his wife were staying. Lord Ventnor, alone of those on board, knew this. Indeed, he accompanied Sir Arthur Deane largely in order to break off a somewhat trying entanglement. He smiled complacently as he thought of the effect on Iris of Mrs. Costello's indignant remonstrances when the baronet asked that injured lady to tell the girl all that had happened at Hongkong.

However, Lord Ventnor was most profoundly annoyed, and he cursed Anstruther from the depths of his heart. But he could see no way out. He came ashore with Iris and her father. The captain of the Orient also joined the party. The three men watched Robert and the girl walking toward them from the group of officers.

"Anstruther is a smart looking fellow," commented Captain Fitzroy. "Who's he?"

Truth to tell, the gallant commander of the Orient was secretly amazed by the metamorphosis effected in Robert's appearance since she scrutinized him through his glasses.

Poor Sir Arthur said not a word, but his lordship was quite at ease.

"From his name and from what Deane tells me I believe he is an ex-officer of the Indian army."

"Ah! He has left the service?"

"Yes. I met him last in Hongkong."

"Then you know him?"

"Quite well, if he is the man I imagine."

"That is really very nice of Ventnor," thought the shipowner. "The last thing I should credit him with would be a forgiving disposition."

Meanwhile, Anstruther was reading Iris a little lecture. "The last thing I should credit him with would be a forgiving disposition."

"Just a personal whim. It will please me."

"If it pleases you, Robert, I am satisfied."

doubts. No one, not excepting the doctors who use it, knew more of its value and in Chinese medicine it might be a chief factor of exceeding nastiness.

Inside the cavern the existence of the parties, complete and entire, was being accounted for recent disturbances on the face of the rock, and newcomers could not, of course, distinguish the houses of poor "J. S." as being the remains of a European.

Anstruther was satisfied that none of them hazarded the remotest guess as to the value of the goods and the party were staring at, and chance helped him to baffle further inquiry.

A tramp on board the Orient was blowing his nose up to some one who was staring at, and chance helped him to baffle further inquiry.

"I can quite understand," he said to Robert, "that you have an affection for this weird place, but I am curious to know why you lay claim to the island. You can hardly intend to return here."

He pointed to Robert's placid stare on the rock.

Anstruther passed before he answered. He felt that Lord Ventnor's dark eyes were fixed on him, and his body was more or less desirous to have this point cleared up. He looked the questioner squarely in the face.

"In some parts of the world," he said, "there are sunken reefs, unknown, uncharted, on which many a vessel has been lost without any contributory fault on the part of her officers."

"Undoubtedly."

"Well, Captain Fitzroy, when I was stationed with my regiment in Hongkong I encountered such a reef and wrecked my life on it. At least that is how it seemed to me then. Fortune threw me ashore here after a long and bitter submergence. You can hardly blame me if I cling to the tiny speck of land that gave me salvation."

"No," admitted the sailor. He knew there was something more in the story than that the text revealed, but it was no business of his.

"Moreover," continued Robert smilingly, "you see I have a partner."

"Then cannot be the slightest doubt about the partner," was the prompt reply.

Then every one laughed. Iris more than any, though Sir Arthur Deane's gayety was forced, and Lord Ventnor could taste the acidity of his own smile.

Later in the day the first lieutenant told his chief of Anstruther's voluntary statement concerning the court martial. Captain Fitzroy was naturally pained by this impression revelation, but he took exactly the same view as that expressed by the first lieutenant in Robert's presence.

Nevertheless he pondered the matter and seized an early opportunity of mentioning it to Lord Ventnor. That distinguished nobleman was vastly surprised to learn how the court martial was held, and he was not a little taken aback by the ground from beneath his feet.

"Yes," he said, in reply to the sailor's request for information, "I know all about it. It could not be other than as you saw, seeing that next to Mrs. Costello I was the principal witness against him."

"That must have been awkward for you," was the unexpected comment.

"Indeed? Why?"

"Because rumor linked your name with that of the lady in a somewhat 'outspoken' manner."

"You astonish me, Anstruther, certainly. Some stupid allegations during the trial, but I had no idea you were able to spread this malicious report subsequently."

"I am not talking of Hongkong, my lord, but of Singapore, months later."

Captain Fitzroy's tone was exceedingly dry. Indeed, some people might think it offensive.

His lordship permitted himself the rare luxury of an angry smile.

"Tumor is a lying jade at the best," he said coolly. "You have reminded me, Captain Fitzroy, that I have uttered no word of scandal about Mr. Anstruther, and any doubts concerning his conduct can be set at rest by perusing the records of his case in the adjutant general's office at Hongkong."

"Hum!" said the sailor, turning on his heel to enter the chart room.

The girl and her father went back to the island with Robert. After a few days the latter decided to ask Mr. Jan to remain in possession until he returned. There was not much risk of another Drak invasion, and the return of Taming Sal's expedition would not encourage a fresh set of marauders, and the Mohammedans would be well armed to meet unforeseen contingencies, while on his (Anstruther's) representations the Orient would land an abundance of stores. In any event, the freedom of the island to live in freedom on Rainbow Island than to be handed over to the authorities as an escaped convict, which must be the fate of the man who matter what magnanimous view the government of India might afterward take of his services.

In not knowing the wrecked circumstances which had come to pass since they parted and which had changed the whole aspect of his life, how could he be sure? Why should it be his miserable lot to snatch the cup of happiness from his lips? In that moment of silence when he was alone, he thought of death alone could remove the burden laid on him. Well, surely he might risk in the sunshine of her laughter for another day. No need to embitter her joyful heart until he was driven to it by dire necessity.

So he resolutely brushed aside the wretched phantom of care and entered into the abandon of the hour with a zest that delighted her. The dear girl imagined that Robert, her Robert, had become another speedy conqueror, and Anstruther himself was much affected by the sudden change in Sir Arthur Deane's demeanor.

They behaved like school children on a picnic. They roamed over Iris' troubles in the matter divided side, too much divided to be at all pleasant. The shipowner tasted some of her sage brood and vowed it was excellent.

Robert carefully secured the pocket-books, money and other effects found on their dead companions. The baronet, of course, knew all the principal officers of the Sinder. He surveyed these mournful relics with sorrowful interest.

"The Sinder was the crack ship of the fleet," said Captain Rose, his trusted commander," he said. "You may well imagine, Mr. Anstruther, what a cruel blow it was to lose such a vessel."

One provision is that the building should be contiguous to the business portion of the city and another that the building shall always be used for the one purpose only, and that in case of failure to carry this purpose out the property shall revert to the Georgetown college to be used for the education of the poor and needy student.

EXCESSIVE SALARIES.

The Matter Will Be Laid Before the Legislature of Kentucky.

Frankfort, Ky., June 29.—State Insurance Inspector Commissioner Henry R. Hewitt will in his annual life insurance report recommend to the general assembly the enactment of a law prohibiting any company which pays an executive officer annual salary of $50,000 from soliciting business in Kentucky. The commissioner contends that no man can earn $100,000 annually, as such executive officer and the people, through law-making bodies, must take a hand in regulating the big insurance companies of the country. The report of the commissioner will not be issued for several weeks.

Convulsion, Fits, then Epilepsy.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine has been so successful in curing these brain-wrecking diseases that there is every reason to believe that even the most hopeless cases can be benefited, if not fully restored. We will be pleased to refer any one thus afflicted to many who now enjoy the blessing of health, after years of hopeless suffering.

I have a son that had been fever when two years old, followed by fits of the worst type, and he was pronounced incurable. I spent hundreds of dollars for medical treatment, but after about fifteen years he became so bad that he was nearly thrown out of the house. He was taken to Leavenworth, Ind. He was confined to his bed for two years, and continued to grow worse, so we brought him home in July, 1902, in an awful condition. He had lost his mind almost entirely. His family knew of no other remedy, so we gave him Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. He was cured, and he has had but one fit since. He is now a healthy, happy man, and he has had but one fit since. He is now a healthy, happy man, and he has had but one fit since.

NOTICE

Springfield, Ky., July 1, 1905.—To the Patrons, Teachers and Pupils of the Common Schools:—The present county adoption of school books, by the terms of the contract, expires two years from now, and under the law, the School Book Company furnishing the books under this contract is required to execute a bond for Ten Thousand Dollars for the faithful performance of the contract. In a number of counties in the State suit was instituted against the School Book Company for a breach of contract, and in one county it was compelled to pay $10,000, the full amount of its bond. The Court of Appeals, in passing on this case, held that the company must execute a new bond, or else forfeit all the contracts it then held in the State. The School Book Company has refused to execute new bond, therefore, all schools must immediately cease to use the books adopted under the County contract, for the law provides that no school shall be taught in, and no part of the common school funds shall be paid to any district, while using the books of any company that refuses to execute the bond required by law.

The State Superintendent of Public Instruction has notified this board, as well as all other county boards having similar adoptions, that the School Book Company has failed and refused to execute the bond required by law, and has further notified us that, under the law, we will be required to use the State Adoption from and after July 1, 1905, and that no money will be paid to any school district that continues the use of books unauthorized by the State Adoption. "The History of Kentucky," "Long's Language Lessons" and "Civil Government" of our County Adoption are the same as the State Adoption and will not have to be changed. The "Spellers," also, will not have to be changed.

The books furnished under the State Adoption are about thirty per cent. cheaper than those furnished under the County Adoption and will in the end result in a great saving to the people, yet we had planned to bring about the change gradually, so as to distribute the cost, but under the decision of the Court, and the positive direction of the State Superintendent, the change must be made at once.

Below you will find the cost and exchange price of the books of the State adoption:

Mr. Jasper Durr is no better at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. Lave Wells, Springfield, visited the former's parents here Friday.

A large crowd attended the hop at the hotel Thursday night.

There are about twenty-five guests at the hotel at present.

Miss Hester Noel is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Della Carey, this week.

The party given by Miss Annie Royalty Saturday night was attended by a large crowd. All report a pleasant time.

Sickening, Shivering Fits

of Ague and Malaria can be relieved and cured with Electric Bitters. This is a pure, tonic medicine, of special benefit in Malaria, for it exerts a true curative influence on the disease, driving it out of the system. It is much to be preferred to Quinine, having none of this drug's bad after-effects.

S. Munday, of Henrietta, Texas, writes: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice, till he took Electric Bitters, which saved his life." At C. J. Haydon's drug store; price, 50 cents, guaranteed.

The Japanese Don't Drink.

The result of the battle is, in reality, the triumph of Sober Japan over whisky-soaked Russia, says the Toronto Globe. It is the greatest temperance lecture ever delivered in the world, to nations and to individuals as well.

What was proved on the wrecked Straits of Korea had already been proved in the destruction of the Port Arthur squadron, in the running fight with the Vladivostok cruisers, in the reduction of an almost impenetrable fortress, and in the land operations in Manchuria. It was in each case Japan against Russia, but it was more. It was temperance against delinquency.

Japan's achievements on land and sea were not directed by men who had spent their days and nights in idleness and dissipation. They were the product of lives of strong, steadfast, sober endeavor, the very opposite of what their enemy had been.

The lesson of the war is not for Russia alone. It is for every nation and every individual who seeks stability and advancement.

Great Britain's greatest danger today is the intemperance of her people. Intemperance and progress do not go together. They are, as Sir Frederick Treves said the other day, hopelessly antagonistic. This eminent authority made the statement that alcoholic drink is even in small quantities absorbs human energy and minimizes the effort of the individual.

Russia has learned this truth, but at a terrible cost. Let Great Britain profit from this lesson before it is too late.

Man Has Two Hearts.

Telegrams and telephone messages in answer to his advertisement to sell his body and two hearts after death have kept A. Durr, of New Rochelle, busy to-day. Although it is known that Durr has been offered large sums of money for his body, he refuses to state the amounts. He is keeping these a secret in hopes that a larger sum may be tendered. None of the offers so far received has been accepted, nor is it likely that a choice will be made for some time, in order to give the entire medical profession of the country a chance to entertain the proposition.

Durr's advertisement, which was printed this morning in a New York paper, read as follows:

PRATHER'S CREEK.

Yankey, Montgomery & Co. received about 200 lambs in this section last Friday for which they paid 6c per lb.

G. H. Christerson's lambs and wool averaged $10 to the ewe. Who can beat this?

Mr. W. S. Christerson and wife, of near Stewart, were visiting their son, G. H. Christerson, Thursday and Friday.

Several of the young folks attended the ice cream supper at Texas Saturday night.

You can't hire hands in this section for love nor money.

WILLISBURG.

We are having lots of rain in this section and wheat is in great danger of being damaged. Farmers are considerably behind on account of the wet weather. Hands are very scarce, and farmers are offering $1 per day for help.

The public school begun here last Monday with a large attendance. Mr. J. T. Prather is the teacher.

Cal. Adkinson, of Cornishville, is here this week on business.

J. W. Shirley was in Lebanon on business this week.

J. F. Reynolds was in Harrodsburg Monday.

There was a musical entertainment given at the home of L. M. Homan last Saturday night which was well attended. Refreshments were served.

The Silent One.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)
Don't tell me what you are going to do. To-morrow's too far away.

Don't tell me too much of what you've done. But what are you doing to-day?

"I'm-going-to" is a lazy lout. That's always calling to you. To sit in the shade while the weeds grow rank.

And your notes lapse, overdue. "See-what-I've-done" is a bold-faced brag.

That stands in the selfsame track And stops you just as the race begins And gets you to looking back.

Tis only "I'm-doing" that ought to speak. Or that ought, at least, to be heard; But he is the fellow who's doing so much He hasn't time for a word.
